It was not definitely known whether Vigilant would start, but the white centreboarder appeared off Ryde at 9 A. M., in trim to meet the two English cutters. It was a pretty sight presented by the three big single-stickers, as they manocuvred near the line, testing and stretching gear. The maten race, fifteen miles to wind-

The course to-day was that of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, known as the "Long course round the Nah." This morning the Sailing Committee decided westerly breeze was most favorable for a start eastward. Therefore the course was from an imaginary line drawn between Ryde Pier and a mark-boat off that point, eastward to No Man Fort Light, past the Warner Light, and around the Nab Lights. From the Nab the course was westward Fort Light. From the Spit the course was eastward to a mark-boat off th West Middle Buoy, opposite Cowes. O'Brien returned to the onslaught, and Cohen, it is said, gave him another push and he feil, striking his head on the curristone, fracturing his skull. O'Brien was taken to Believue Hospital, where he died on the following day.

Cohen, who is only eighteen years old, disappeared shortly after the altercation, and was not seen again until last night, when the detectives arrested him. He had returned to his home, at 62 East Broadway, believing that the trouble had blown over.

The detectives found him in bed, and made him get up and accompany them to the station-house.

Young Cohen insisted that he had merely acted in self-defense. He said that O'Brien wanted him to pay for his shine, and when he refused called him harsh names and struck him in the face. O'Brien then seized him, Cohen alleges, and in trying to get away from him he gave him a push and he fell down.
